RENSHAW, GIVEN 1 TO 14 YEARS, IS TAKEN TO PRISON

East St. Louis Realty Dealer
Receives Indeterminate
Sentence on Plea of Guilty to Note Forgery.

Justice was swiftly applied today at Belleville when the Sheriff started for the Illinois State Penitentiary at Joliet with Henry T. Renshaw, 48 years old, president of the John W. Renshaw's Sons Realty and Insurance Co. of East St. Louis, who yesterday pleaded guilty of having forged a promissory note and was sentenced by Circuit Judge Bernreuter to an indeterminate term of one to 14 years.

Renshaw has admitted responsibility for the failure of his firm, which has liabilities of about $400,000 and assets of about half that sum, including heavy losses to a large number of investors of moderate means, mostly truck gardeners and working men and women.

On Aug. 19 last the Real Estate Exchange of East St. Louis demanded that Renshaw hand over his business for liquidation to trustees appointed by the exchange. A week ago he was indicted on five counts for forgery, and at 8:30 p. m. yesterday surrendered and entered a plea of guilty to the forgery of a $2500 promissory note against John and Julia Calvin of East St. Louis, drawn in favor of himself, which he later sold to Henry F. Gain, a barber of East St. Louis. The other four charges were removed from the docket, with leave to restate.

Up to the day the firm was taken over by the trustees, Renshaw was highly respected in his community, and his business—real estate and fire insurance—was supposed to be one of the most prosperous in East St. Louis.

Fast and Loose Career. Subsequent developments disclosed that Renshaw's career as a business man had been fast and loose. His method was peculiar in that he gave most consideration to the accepted forms of recording the firm's transactions in books, depending largely upon his memory. He was always of pleasing personality and engaging charm, and the persons with whom he dealt reposed implicit confidence in his integrity. Even after he had been exposed, many of his customers were disinclined to prosecute their claims and dismissed their losses with expressions of sympathy for the man.

The business was established by his father in 1882 and inherited by the two sons, Henry T. and John W., with the former as senior partner. John confined himself to the real estate and insurance scales end of the business and is not known to have taken part in any of the irregular transactions.

How He Obtained Money. When business was dull, Henry Renshaw didn't worry. He simply wrote a promissory note payable to himself, forged the name of a friend to it, forged a mortgage against the friend's property to secure it and then sold the bogus paper to another friend, always to an investor of very moderate means. But he would not stop there. It was a small matter to record the mortgage and then have it released without knowledge of the holder so that he could write another mortgage against the same property.

With other persons, who did not understand the technique of dealing in real estate, Renshaw would lend them money on their property, for which he took a mortgage, and after they had paid the mortgage off in installments, he would merely give them a receipt in full and retain the mortgage, which he would sell to another. He would protect himself in transactions of this kind by pocketing the proceeds from the sale of the mortgage and keeping up the interest payments.

What He Did With Money Unknown. What Renshaw did with the money no one seems to know. He was temperate in his conduct and habits, devoted to his family and maintained one of the best residences in East St. Louis, which has been turned over to the receivers for the benefit of the creditors.

As Renshaw kept no tangible record of his irregular transactions, those in charge of the liquidation, which passed from trustees to receivers, doubt that they will ever be able to give an exact statement of the firm's affairs. It is hoped to pay the investors 60 cents on the dollar in the final accounting.

Garvey Pleads Not Guilty. KANSAS CITY, Mo., Oct. 3. — Roy Garvey, slayer of his father and business associate J. W. Garvey, pleaded not guilty when arraigned on a first-degree murder charge yesterday before Judge Ralph S. Latschaw. His trial was set for Nov. 27. He was returned to jail.

CASE TO KEEP THREE NAMES OFF BALLOT MAY BE APPEALED

Demurrer in Assessor's Contest Decision is Sustained by Circuit Judge Hall.

A demurrer to the suit of Jacob Stocke, a taxpayer, to enjoin the Board of Election Commissioners from placing the names of three candidates for Assessor on the ballot in the election next month was sustained yesterday by Circuit Judge Hall. The suit is said to have been filed in the interest of W. F. Buder, Republican candidate and incumbent.

It is contended that the office is appointive and not elective. On this basis Buder's term as an appointive officer would continue several months longer than the elective term provides for. The compensation, including fees, also would be larger, it was stated. The demurrer of the board recited that the petition did not state a cause of action and that Stocke has no direct interest in the litigation.

It was announced that an appeal would be taken to the Supreme Court. Oscar E. Buder, a brother of Assessor Buder, is the plaintiff's lawyer. Attorney Jacob M. Lushy was permitted to intervene in the case in behalf of George Truska, Democratic nominee for the same office.

STATE EDUCATION BOARD OPPOSED IN LETTER BY TOBIN

Head of St. Louis School Administration Declares Proposed Measure Threatens Home Rule.

Home rule of St. Louis public schools is seriously endangered by a constitutional convention proposal which would create a State board of education with supervision over all public schools of the State, John C. Tobin, president of the St. Louis Board of Education, declares in a letter of protest to the constitutional convention committee on Education.

This proposal, said by board members to have been tentatively adopted by the Committee of Education as a section of the report it is to submit to the constitutional convention.

The State board of education, as proposed, would be composed of six elective members, not more than three from the same political party, and "have general supervision of the public schools of the State."

Inclusion of this section in the Constitution, the letter stated, would give the State board authority to determine the salaries paid teachers, the proper courses to be taught in the St. Louis schools, the character and location of the plans of school buildings to be erected, management of the local board's invested funds and would deprive the St. Louis board of its control over educational matters. Such a system, it was said, would result in divided power, weakening of local authority, and cause delay and confusion in administration.

Present Method.
Direction of the public schools in St. Louis now is entirely in the hands of the St. Louis Board of Education, created in 1897 by an act of the Legislature granting full local government of educational matters in cities having more than 50,000 population.

The letter pointed out that the present Constitution gives the State Board of Education "supervision of the public schools" and that the powers and duties of the board to be prescribed by law. The proposed draft, Tobin said, gives the State board the right, and consequently the duty, to exercise general supervision of the schools, regardless of whether enabling legislation is enacted.

Plan "Un-Adapted."
Such a plan, declared Tobin, is "un-adapted to city conditions." Proper solution of educational questions in St. Louis and in other large cities of Missouri require an intimate and specialized knowledge of local conditions, Tobin said, "which cannot be possessed by nonresidents of the particular community. No State board, whether it be appointive or elective, can, in the very nature of things, so satisfactorily administer the detailed functions of public education in St. Louis as can a board chosen locally."

The letter suggested an amendment to the section, prepared by the St. Louis Board of Education, which would prevent the proposed State board of education from having supervision of the public schools in cities with a population of 50,000 or more.

400,000 GALLONS OF ALCOHOL WITHDRAWN FOR 'HAIR TONIC'
Cleveland Real Estate Broker and Others Arrested; Diversion to "Bootleggers" Charged.

CLEVELAND, O., Oct. 2.—Much importance is attached by Federal authorities to the arrest of Samuel W. Selker, member of a real estate brokerage firm, in connection with the alleged diversion to bootleggers of 400,000 gallons of alcohol withdrawn on permits to Louis Auerbach, ostensibly for the manufacture of hair tonic and toilet water.

Auerbach and his brother, Abraham, said to be leaders in the alleged conspiracy to violate the national prohibition law, are under $50,000 bond. Joseph C. Breitenstein, Assistant United States District Attorney, said that Selker will be charged with conspiracy and that he will ask that his bond be fixed at an amount equal to the Auerbachs when he is arraigned.

Selker is the fourteenth person arrested in the case. Federal prohibition operatives charge that he conducted devices whereby the alleged activities of the Auerbachs were shielded from discovery.

Testimony in the case will be heard by the Federal grand jury.

MOTION PICTURE ACTRESS BROKE
LOS ANGELES, Cal., Oct. 2.—Mildred Harris, motion picture actress and former wife of Charlie Chaplin, filed a petition in bankruptcy here, with liabilities listed at $30,000 and assets $1500, which the petition declared was the value of wearing apparel and claimed as exempt. Miss Harris filed the petition at Duluth, Minn., where she is filling a vaudeville engagement, and it was forwarded here for filing.

Two long illnesses and lack of employment for many months brought about her present financial condition, according to word received here from Miss Harris. She asserted that after settling with her lawyers she had but $8000 left of the money which Chaplin gave her.

SUGGESTS TEST SUIT ON PUBLIC WORK PAYMENTS

Board of Public Service Head
Would Determine if City
Could Settle With Cash.

Institution of a test suit to determine if the city may pay cash for public improvement work and be reimbursed through city tax bills against the property involved, was suggested by President Kinsey of the Board of Public Service, in a letter sent today to the Board of Estimate and Apportionment.

Such a method would reduce the cost of improvements to property owners, who must pay higher prices now because contractors make provision in their bids for the high discount rate on the special tax bills they receive in payment for construction work.

Compton Avenue Suggested.

Kinsey proposed the test suit be made over the paving of Compton avenue, from Lucas avenue to Morgan street, estimated to cost $3900. The Board of Estimate and Apportionment would appropriate money to pay for the work and tax bills payable to the city, would be issued against property in the benefit district. A suit would be instituted to test the legality of this appropriation and carried to the Supreme Court.

Sections 3 and 4, article 24, of the City Charter, provide the city may appropriate money to pay for public works and be reimbursed by issuing tax bills against the property, but these sections never have been tested in the courts.

In the last few years, Kinsey declared, contractors have had to accept discounts of 10 to 15 per cent on the special tax bills when sold to banks, and as a result make provision for this loss in their bids. Construction costs would be lowered, he declared, through sharper competition among contractors, which always appears on cash work. Few of the contractors hold the tax bills for the four or five year collection period, due to lack of capital.

Banks Do Not Want Tax Bills.

Kinsey asserted the Board of Public Service had been unable to carry on any sewer construction work in the last year, with the exception of a few small jobs, because the banks did not care to accept the special tax bills. He mentioned an instance of one contractor who took the plans of six sewer districts to the banks and was told the tax bills could not be handled for him even on a 20 per cent discount basis.

"Public work is being held up through the conditions arising from this costly special tax bill system," Kinsey said, "and a remedy can be had in the city paying for the work and collecting from the property owners, thus saving them money by eliminating inflation of costs to cover tax bill discounts."

Creation by bond issue of a $2,000,000 revolving fund to pay for construction work in the way proposed in Kinsey's letter, was suggested to the General Council on Civic Needs when it was considering items for the $7,500,000 bond issue to be voted Feb. 14, but was rejected. Kinsey said a $2,000,000 fund would be sufficient and the city would make money on it, as it now is borrowing money at 4 1/2 to 5 per cent and the tax bills draw 6 to 8 per cent, the city already having the office machinery for collecting such bills with no added cost.

Blemishes are generally caused by infection from dust and dirt

You can free your skin from blemishes by using this simple treatment:

Just before you go to bed, wash in the usual way with Woodbury's Facial Soap and warm water, finishing with a dash of cold water.

Now dip the tips of your fingers in warm water and rub them on the cake of Woodbury's until they are covered with a heavy cream-like lather.

Cover each blemish with a thick coat of this and leave it on for ten minutes. Then rinse very carefully, first with clear hot water, then with cold.

LIPTON'S INSTANT COCOA

Here's a worthy brother to Lipton's Tea and Coffee

"WHEN I can produce a perfect cocoa, I'll make it," said Sir Thomas J. Lipton. That was years ago.

Today those conditions have been met. An entirely new process has been devised. This process does three vital things to improve the food value and flavor of cocoa.

It removes the tasteless, useless shells; it retains more of the rich nutritious cocoa butter. It thoroughly roasts and blends the cocoa beans, giving Lipton's a flavor and fragrance that is superior to any other cocoa.

You'll find this new and better Lipton Cocoa richer, distinct in taste, and with more of that chocolate quality than any cocoa you have tasted, and it actually costs you less, because only half the usual quantity need be used.

It is called Lipton's Instant Cocoa because it dissolves instantly.

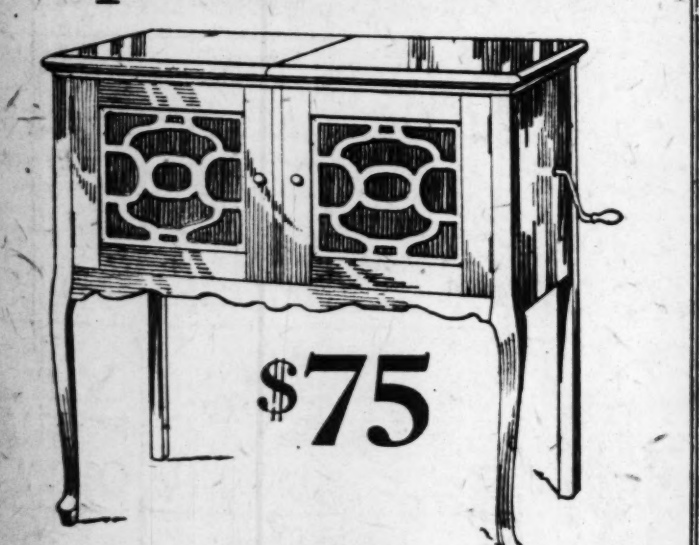

Look for the signature of Sir Thomas J. Lipton on every package of tea, coffee or cocoa you buy—thus

You will be delighted with Lipton's new Yellow Label Coffee. After years of experimenting Sir Thomas J. Lipton is able to say, "I have developed a blend of coffee that is a worthy associate of Lipton's Tea. I have given it my name and I believe that it has no superior in the world." A new screw-lock-top can keeps Lipton's Coffee fresh before and after opening. The last spoonful is good.

Immac BANISHES BODY ODORS

At least half the men and women in every walk of life unknowingly offend others with disagreeable body odors. It is now definitely known that one disagreeable odor is due to armpit secretions—no sweat perspiration.

People who perspire little or none are just as likely to be troubled, and the unfortunate fact about this offense is, that those who offend are rarely conscious of the odor themselves. This and all other body odors can be corrected by the regular use of Immac, the wonderful new deodorant.

This fragrant snow white cream completely neutralizes odor, without stopping or interfering in the least with healthy perspiration. Men and women both, need it to keep their person fresh and immaculately clean.

It takes but a minute to apply to the armpits, feet or elsewhere, it is not sticky or greasy, and dries almost instantly. Perfectly harmless, and cannot irritate or stain the clothing. Use it freely any time. Try a 3c tube.

A Talk to Mothers— Not Frivolous, But Thoughtful Mothers.

Each winter season brings coughs, colds, catarrh, pneumonia, "flu", and tuberculosis. Loving mothers dread the onslaught of these diseases. Thoughtful mothers often provide against the danger of colds and coughs. Such mothers have fewer hours of anxiety, and sleep at night, watching at the bedside of a loved one.

Some mothers, however, do not know how to provide in advance for the colds and coughs that are bound to appear.

Here is a simple inexpensive way—practiced by over 300,000 mothers during the past twelve years, as a great volume of testimony proves. Not later than the first cold or minor cough, they make up a full pint of home made cough and cold medicine—using 5¢ oz. of the pure Eucalypti-Mentha-Lavender, mixed with home made sugar syrup or honey. Costs less than $1.00.

Mentha-Lavender is a pure essential oil, no other, opium or narcotic drugs—that it is given to infants without harm. Children and adults like its delicious flavor—and its marvelous, healthy action in stopping colds and coughs before the dangerous complications set in. There is nothing sold so pure, so prompt, so inexpensive.

Resolve to be a "Thoughtful Mother". Get Eucalypti-Mentha-Lavender today and drive the cold and cough away. "Best ever for cough and cold." Send 5 cents for sample. The Blackmore Products Co., Dayton, Ohio.

MRS. STILLMAN HAPPY IN RECOVERY OF GUY

Her Real Victory, She Says, Is the Fact That All Her Children Now Live With Her.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

THREE RIVERS, Quebec, Oct. 2.—Mrs. Anne U. Stillman, talking to the Post-Dispatch representative, said today that, now that baby Guy is recovering from his fever, she is very happy. She said that what constitutes her real victory is the fact that all her children are now living with her. Her daughter, she said, who had testified for her father, believing the charge against Mrs. Stillman to be true, realized at the end that she had been persuaded wrongly and she is now with her mother. As to her sons, they always have stood by her and have foregone many luxuries and made sacrifices to have the case brought to a happy outcome. In her statement, Mrs. Stillman refers to the region around and in the St. Maurice Valley and spoke feelingly of the brave and loyal people here who have stood by her "in spite of money and promises."

Praises Loyal Friends.
"One feels strong," she said, "in knowing one can rely on the loyalty of friends. People here do not forget a kindness and, in return, they give all they have. Many have refused money to perjure themselves against me and those who did have repented deeply."

Mrs. Stillman said she wanted to talk, not exactly to be quoted in the newspapers, but only to express her feelings. She does not want to be vain in claiming her victory. "Great victors," she said, "do not sing when they win. They weep in thinking of the sacrifices made."

Glad for Her Child.
She is glad for her child, that is all, she said, and now that his sickness is diagnosed as a simple childhood fever, she is overjoyed. It's a reaction from the many worries from and of which the attack of sickness on baby Guy seemed to be the final straw. She considers he has been avenged and said she did not care to be considered now that her son's honor was safe.

Mrs. Stillman said she had no intention of instituting divorce proceedings, as she had no desire to legitimize his children by Florence Leeds after he had tried to prove he was not the father of Guy.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.
NEW YORK, Oct. 3.—John F. Brennan, chief counsel for Mrs. James A. Stillman, obtained an order from Supreme Court Justice Morschauer, returnable before him, requiring Stillman's lawyers to show cause why the report of Referee Daniel J. Gleason should not be confirmed and judgment entered in her favor.

The order, which was served on Cornelius J. Sullivan, counsel of record for the banker, late yesterday, is returnable tomorrow. It requires the presence of Stillman's lawyers in court at White Plains at 10 a. m. tomorrow, if they intend to oppose the report, which was filed in Carmel by Referee Gleason Friday.

Brennan's move ends some jockeying at the tail end of the race which began Friday when Stillman's lawyers made a motion, returnable before Justice Tompkins at Nyack Saturday, for "judgment and such other relief" as they might be entitled to. It is now announced that should Stillman's lawyers appeal from a decision by Justice Morschauer they will demand a trial by jury. This trial would necessarily have to take place at Carmel, N. Y., where the action by Stillman was started.

"She can frame the issues and insist upon a jury trial," said Brennan yesterday. It is understood that Mrs. Stillman now insists upon this. Another referee could be appointed only with her consent and she won't give this.

ISADORA DUNCAN BAN LIFTED BY GOVERNMENT

Dancer in Bad Humor After 24-Hour Detention at Ellis Island as Soviet Agent Suspect

NEW YORK, Oct. 3.—Isadora Duncan and her exuberant young poet husband, Serge Yesenin, were permitted to land in the United States yesterday after the Department of Justice had detained them 24 hours to learn whether or not the dancer, who arrived from Moscow Sunday, was a courier for the Russian soviet government.

Isadora was in a bad humor last night and she did not reveal much happiness over being allowed, by a board of inquiry at Ellis Island, to enter the country.

Isadora's Comments.

"They held me because I came from Moscow," she said. "What did they ask me? Oh, they wanted to know if I was a classical dancer. I told them I didn't know, because my dancing is personal. They wanted to know what I looked like when I danced. How did I know? I never saw myself dance."

It was officially stated at Ellis Island that, broadly speaking, the Department of Justice detained the dancer because of her long residence in Russia and gossip that connected her with the soviet Government and because it was suspected that she might be a courier for the soviet on her ostensible touring of this country.

It Was a Fateful Day.

It was a fateful day for Isadora. She was nagged so much, she complained, that she didn't have a bit of nourishment all day except one cup of coffee at breakfast time. First, she said, immigration authorities hauled her around the pier and bothered her with questions about her luggage. Then she was rushed to Ellis Island with her husband and the inquiry took up the most of the afternoon.

Isadora had little to say, after the release, but young Serge, who looks quite like an American, and much more like a poet, was laughing and chatting and having lots of fun swapping some of his knowledge of French and Russian for American slang.

Her father had left the child alone in the buggy for a moment, and in his absence Frances Lucille struck the horse with the whip, causing it to run away. The child died two and one-half hours after the accident from a fractured skull. A Coroner's jury returned a verdict of death by accident.

A $20,000 bag of gold dust

ONE morning in 1858 a $20,000 bag of gold dust was received by McKesson & Robbins. It had come from Montana—a long way in those days—with a letter saying: "We want to open a drug store out here. Please send a complete stock-in-return for this dust."

By 1858 McKesson & Robbins were thirty-five years old. Their reputation was already established from the Atlantic to the Pacific Coast.

Today the name McKesson & Robbins stands for the latest developments in Pharmaceutical Chemistry; for reliability in drug supplies; for undyingly fair dealing. In their laboratories some of the world's most useful forms of drugs have been discovered and developed.

The Laxative for Children

Children often need a health conditioner and bowel regulator. Anax is the ideal laxative. It is an inexpensive and pleasant insurance against sickness. Anax is Nature's way. It is composed of two of the most efficient medicinal agents carefully combined with luscious fruit juices. The children love it and it is equally good for adults. This candy laxative has the taste of ripe fruit. When your little ones are peevish and have coated tongues give them a small fruit-flavored pastille of Anax. It acts easily and doesn't in any way suggest medicine. Freedom from constipation means health, growth and resistance to sickness. Keep Anax always on hand. Doctors recommend it. Ask for the genuine made by McK & R.

This refreshing tooth powder generates oxygen which destroys bacteria and leaves a cool, clean feeling in the mouth and insures gleaming white teeth—important factors in health. The McK & R Calox will last a long time. You clean your teeth scientifically and thoroughly when you use McKesson & Robbins' Calox.

Comfort for Tired "Motor" Eyes

Gleaming sun, swirling dust, changes in temperature, high winds, long trips by motor, all these factors are irritants to the delicate membrane that lines the eye lids. The human eye stands up very well under the many adverse circumstances but when Nature protests. We don't give eyes enough attention. The McK & R Eye Bath, which includes an eye cup, is a simple, safe means of protecting the eyes. For tired, weak or inflamed eyes, it is the most efficient lotion. It contains no opiates or harmful drugs. This simple and safe bath for the eyes may be used either with an eye cup or a dropper. For weak or inflamed eyes use the McK & R Eye Bath three or more times daily as required. Guard your eyes carefully—they are among your most precious possessions. It was a great time for all of us when the scientist waked up to the everyday life and problems of the folks about him. Among the many things he's done is showing the way to better sleep.

What Science has to say about your night's rest

Man was created to stand upright. So people got the impression that he lies out flat in sleep. Far indeed from the truth. The human body is a thing of curves. Of weight very unevenly distributed.

Simmons alone, among makers of sleeping equipment, seems to have taken full account of these elementary facts.

So you hear people everywhere distinguishing Simmons Bed
Springs as the bed springs built for sleep.

You find the Simmons Spring supporting the body, where the old-type spring let the sleeper down into a hollow.

A Simmons Spring is taut and firm—and with that elasticity that only Simmons knows how to put into a spring. Because by the practical application of science—Simmons has discovered how to build a spring that is always level, while still conforming to the curves and weight of the body in every sleeping position.

One to whiten enamel
by removing film

The other to stop decay in crevices and harden gums

DON'T "remember the time when your teeth were white." Begin using Sanitol Tooth Paste now, and soon you'll forget that
time when your teeth
were temporarily yellow.
That discoloration is film covering the white enamel. Remove the film with Sanitol and the natural whiteness appears again.

But a white surface doesn't necessarily mean a wholly sound tooth.

The crevices between teeth retain shreds of food—out-of reach of the tooth brush. These particles ferment, form acids, start decay. To force out those dangerous shreds you must use a Liquid Antiseptic. Follow brushing with Sanitol Liquid
Antiseptic to rinse out crevices, harden tender gums, thoroughly cleanse the mouth and sweeten the breath.

Sanitol Tooth Paste restores whiteness to teeth because the glycerine in Sanitol softens the film, and the finely pulverized dental chalk then cleans it away. You'll delight in the flavorful pep-perminence of Sanitol. It is a snow-white, creamy brushful of delicious-ness.

But USE BOTH for the completest cleansing and most refreshing, lingering after-feel you can imagine.

AMERICAN HISTORY FOR AMERICAN CHILDREN

How Leif, a Young Norseman, Son of Eric the Red, Accidentally Came Upon a New Land and What He Saw There.

He hoped it might be Greenland but it turned out to be an entirely different country.

By HENDRIK VAN LOON,
Author of "The Story of Mankind."

(Copyright, 1922.)

THE hero of the first discovery of America was a young Norseman by the name of Leif. From a saga written by Hauk Erlendsson some time during the first 20 years of the fourteenth century it appears that Leif was the son of our old friend Eric, who had been the promoter of the first Greenland expedition.

In the year 999 Leif had gone back to Norway to the homeland of his people to visit his relatives and to tell the King, whose name was Olaf Trygvason, all about the Norwegian settlements in the far-away regions of the West. The King took a great liking for this young boy. He encouraged him to become a Christian and asked him to return to Greenland and spread the gospel among his own people. Leif agreed to do this.

In the year 1000 (a very easy date to remember) he bade farewell to Norway and sailed for home. For many weeks he was tossed about by the angry sea. But finally he saw land. He hoped that it might be Greenland, but the coast was quite flat and there were no mountains. And as Leif knew that he must have discovered another country. He went ashore and he found the land covered with vines (but whether he meant vines from which wine is made or wine-berries we do not know).

For several weeks he sailed along the coast and then a lucky Eastern wind blew him back to his own country. Of course, he told the people of his village all about the things he had seen and his brother, Thorstein, became so curious that he took ship and sailed west without losing a moment's time. But he was not successful and he came home in great disappointment and then he died.

A short while afterwards his widow, whose name was Gudrid, married a man by the name of Thorfinn Karlsefni who had come from Iceland. He had come to Greenland merely for a visit, but when his wife told him of the unfortunate expedition of her late husband he decided that an expedition toward the west might prove a very profitable venture. And so, in the year 1001, he sailed away from Greenland with four vessels and 350 men and women who were willing to trust his leadership.

To Be Continued Tomorrow.

Readers who clip and preserve these articles will have a splendid collection of historical facts. Valuable for reference or for supplementing the study of history by children.

Speaking of Rewards

When Edwin Clapp Shoes were awarded the Grand Prize for high grade footwear at the World's Fair in 1915, and then repeated the following year at the International Exposition at San Diego, two things were publicly proved.

First: That making shoes of the finest material and with painstaking care for nearly seventy years had taught Edwin Clapp & Son something about fine shoemaking that was uncommon.

And Second: That what thousands of people already knew about Edwin Clapp Shoes was confirmed by the judges at these competitive Expositions. They awarded first honors to the Edwin Clapp Shoe because of those qualities for which prudent people buy and praise them.

We would win additional honors for Edwin Clapp Shoes by having you, Dear Sir, or Madam, wear them. Try one pair.

MOVE TO ADJOURN CHARTER SESSION DEC. 1 IS GAINING

Those Desiring Conservative
Revision of State Constitution Reported Back of Movement.

ALTERNATIVE FORCED
BEFORE DELEGATES

Drive to Wind Up Work or Resignation to Dangerous Drawn-Out Session Is the Status.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Oct. 3.—A movement "to finish the job by Dec. 1" has gained considerable headway among those delegates to the Constitutional convention who are regarded as sincerely desiring a conservative revision of the organic law of the State. The movement has not taken on any of the aspects of a bloc organization, as there is no head or any desire to have one. The men who have expressed themselves in sympathy with the purpose are those who have most bitterly opposed the formation of combinations within the convention.

Developments within that body, however, have forced the delegates to the brink of an alternative—either a relentless drive to get the revision completed without further loss of time, or resignation to a long drawn out convention with increasing discontent among taxpayers and probable defeat of the revision on its submission.

The convention now has been in session nearly five months and has spent about $200,000, and while it has accomplished much toward the end for which it was conceived and convened, every step has been in the face of last ditch fighting by a little minority of men within its ranks who for one reason or another desire no change in the present Constitution and came to the convention to prevent one being made.

Fighting has been doing very ably, long and frequent speeches, frequent efforts to amend recommendations of committees and other artifices which on the surface appear as innocent parts of the construction being laboriously pushed forward by those who do desire the present Constitution revised upward.

Talk recently has arisen that "a recess until after the election would be a good thing." One of the advocates of such a step is Joseph B. Shannon, one of the two Democratic "bosses" of Kansas City. His argument is that the "convention ought to be kept out of politics," and with that sentiment he has interested a number of delegates regarded as working for a revision. The basis of the latter class, however, believe that a recess at this juncture, when the convention—though slowly—is moving forward, would jeopardize the probability of any real good coming of it.

If anything like a majority of the members take kindly to the "finish the job by Dec. 1" idea, a further move may be expected toward limitation of the interminable debate which has accompanied consideration in Committee of the Whole of the first six committee reports. A resolution toward that end has already received 40 out of 69 votes cast, and failed of passage by only two, a total of 42 being required to write such a rule.

Unless the convention finishes its work by Jan. 1 next, complications will arise, as the Legislature will convene within a few days thereafter and difficulty will be experienced in housing both it and the convention in the Capitol. The convention now is occupying the hall of the House of Representatives and no suitable building exists in Jefferson City to accommodate an overflow such as would be created.

The convention today is deliberating on recommendations of the Committee on Executive and Ministerial Departments that the number of State departments be limited to 12, a move designed to cut down the number of boards, bureaus and commissions in the State Government, of which more than 70 now are functioning. A number of substitutes and amendments are pending, all yesterday having been devoted to debate on them.

MEXICO LAYS JUAREZ REVOLT
TO "PROPAGANDA" FROM U. S.

By the Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, Oct. 3.—"Propaganda" originating in the United States is blamed for the recent revolt of the Mexican garrison at Juarez in a statement issued today by the Mexican embassy here. "The official information tends to show," says the embassy's statement, "that the mutiny of Juarez is due to propaganda emanating from the United States. The present situation is normal and business is carried on as usual."

NEW YORK, Oct. 3.—That portion of New York which takes its baseball seriously is most deeply concerned over the case of Pitcher Jess Barnes, hurler extraordinary to John J. McGraw and vital factor in beating the Yankees out of the title and the major slice of the world's series melon last year.

Jess has not had a good year. Neither was his last season anything to compare with. But Jess finished out two world's series games, and won them, incidentally beating the men of Huggins out of the title. Barnes has not been used by McGraw recently and the theory locally, among the preferred successors, is that McGraw is going to hurl Jess like a Mills bomb and break up the Yankees a second time.

It is a possibility supported only by the fact that Barnes appears to have been treated. Conservative opinion is that Barnes has little left to withstand a determined attack. It was this self-same thought, however, that resulted in the American League downfall last year.

Bush and Nehf Probably. Speculation as to the probable opening-day pitchers has hardly considered any other names than those of Joe Bush for the Yankees and Art Nehf for the Giants. Nehf won one game of the last world's series and only the toughest kind of misfortune beat him out of two other excellent pitched games. It is inconceivable that McGraw will start any other hurler than this veteran southpaw.

New York is taking its second intra-world series rather seriously, despite the fact that game No. 1 between the Giants and the Yanks is only one day distant and that the hour of the tickets calper and the hot-dog man is at hand. The walls of the monster 3000-room hives for the entertainment of man and other animals are fairly bulging; but not with world's series guests alone. The bankers of the United States, in convention assembled here, take up so much space that the poor millionaire club owner can hardly horn in.

The presence of the bankers is a coincidence. The convention of money handlers was not timed to coincide with the world's series; but at that a few banking interests may come in handy in taking care of the expected world's series "gate."

$700,000 "Gate" Expected. This is expected to be in the neighborhood of $700,000, or about $220,000 less than the receipts of last year. The expected shrinkage will not be because of waning interest, but because the nine-game series of last season has been cut to seven contests. The reduction seems to diminish all hope of attaining the "million-dollar gate" which was the goal of club owners. Until the nine games are restored or the prices increased it will be beyond attainment, even with increased seating facilities.

The newspapers are more excited over the series than the populace, as nearly as can be learned on a few hours' stay here. They have been warming up last year's arguments like a Monday re-hash of Sunday's roast. The ingredients are the same, but the mixture is different. For, only a few more native-born faces roared the Giants last year, this season.

Giant Money Scarce in the Face of 7 to 5 Odds Offered on the Yankees

The only dissenting voices, lifted in defense of the Giants' chances belong to the Giants themselves, but their admirers are loath to snap up the 7-to-5 betting bait that is being dangled with purported ubiquity, in front of all who lift their voices to question the Yanks.

The difference in the pitching in the case of the Yankees, as contrasted with their weakness in this respect last year, is the universal and almost the sole reason ascribed for the switch from popular support of the Giants to the Yanks.

Only faintly is a note of question raised concerning the weak hitting with which the Yanks have met enemy hurling during the last week or more. The fact that the Yanks would have finished the season tied with the Browns had Harry Frazee or his manager seen fit to start Pennock instead of Ferguson last Saturday seems to have impressed only a few of the analysts.

"Just a slump," it is explained by Miller Huggins. "You'll see them hitting and scrapping just as they did on two Western trips when they had to fight. They came up when they beat the Browns, thinking it was all over," and they did not get quickly back on their stride," the Rabbit explains last night. "Don't bother about the hitting. It's their what's worrying you."

Barnie's splendid exhibition and revived ambition are factors that are also being considered by followers of the Yanks. They expect Babe to be at his best and become The home-run hero of all world's series, past or to come.

Bush is really behaving and has been the local critics say. He had to. With his home-run record last on the Yanks are credited with superior strength in this department. It is the unanimous conclusion of the newspaper critics that the Yanks are the logical favorites.

In this they are in perfect accord with Byron Bancroft Johnson, president of the American League, who is on the ground early, notwithstanding he is invading the citadel of his arch-enemy, the Giants.

Col. Jacob Ruppert and Col. Tillinghast Huston of the New York club, Col. Huston often has unleashed the fires of wrath upon the devoted head of the Giants. However, these are those who say that the Colonel himself is not nearly so fiery as his likker. And there are doubtless a great many who would like to do justice to the Colonel by putting bolts to the proof.

For once Ban and Til have agreed on one point—it is that the American League candidates for the world's title will have no difficulty in coping the major part of the series melon.

What's a Series to New York?

Last year New York had the world's series all to itself; and, in the language of the hotel trade "ate it up." The crowds that thronged here from out of town were poured into vast hoppers of hostilities and disappeared like a chub minnow down the maw of a black bear.

What would have happened in St. Louis had the series gone there? There were mere guess work; we know that there would have been a vast commotion and lots of noise; but in this man's town the series spelt only a few more native-born faces roared the Giants last year, this season.

Interest Not So Great This Year. Interest in the world's series en route to New York was noticeably less than in former seasons. Smoking room conversations about baseball were almost negligible. The fact that the New York clubs again won by right of purchase may have lessened the interest generally throughout the country.

One New York team and one Western club form the right combination to keep the pot boiling. And yet, as matters now stand, it seems very probable that if there is a battle of check books next fall, both New York clubs will again emerge with the spoils and the best players.

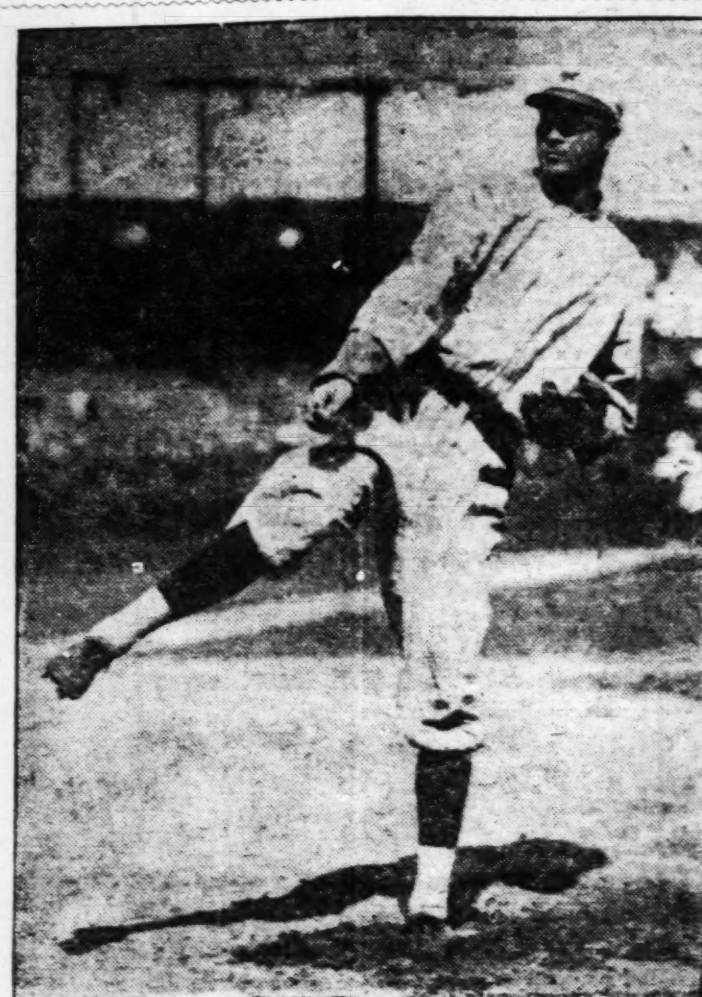

St. Louisans and former St. Louisans connected with the world's series rivals are: Henry Fabian, ground-keeper, formerly with the Browns; Fred Hoffman, Yankee catcher, St. Louis-born; Cony Dolan, and Jess Burkett, Giants' coaches, former players with the St. Louis clubs; Frank Snyder, Giants, a former Cardinal catcher, and Miller Huggins, Yankees manager, formerly manager of the Cardinals.

John McGraw also was with the Cardinals once, but all he played that year was the races.

Miller Huggins doesn't care who wins the world's series, provided it isn't the Giants.

New York is still determined to pin on St. Louis the red badge of

Will This 1921 Hero Repeat?

JESS BARNES.

Followers of the Giants are inclined to pin their world series hopes on Jess Barnes. He has not had a good season, but last year, after a mediocre performance in the pennant dash his relief pitching won the championship for McGraw's men.

pop bottle barbarity. This developed in comment on the announcement that Ban Johnson had given railroad fare and a world's series seat to the Indianapolis man who testified that Witt was struck by a pop bottle upon which he had stepped while running after a fly ball at St. Louis.

One commentator said the letter writer was from St. Louis instead of Indianapolis, implying prejudiced testimony. He also referred to three stitches having been taken in the wound of Witt.

Witt's wound was cured with court plaster. And when a photographer was sent out to get a picture of the injury inflicted they put Witt to bed and bound a towel around his head, to make the photograph indicate a more serious injury, according to Bob Quinn.

It reads like retaliation for the "bought and paid for" comment of the West as to New York's pennant-acquiring methods.

However, New York is now saying to all St. Louisans: "Go home and do likewise. You made the coin this year—spend it for players, like we do."

Unfortunately the Browns have no Harry Frazee to be complaisant and sell them eight or 10 stars.

New York's Big Advantage.

And when it comes to baseball harvests, St. Louis cannot yield the sums earned by the Giants and Yanks. In New York the guests of the Browns' earnings this year some-

COURT HOLDS BOXING IS ILLEGAL IN COLORADO

By the Associated Press. DENVER, Colo., Oct. 3.—The fate of boxing in Colorado was rendered extremely uncertain in the opinion of fight droves here by the decision of the State Supreme Court yesterday holding in error court instructions for acquittal in District Court of John F. Corbett, John Kanner and associates on a charge of aiding and abetting the promotion of a boxing contest.

The higher court held that prize fighting is illegal; and that the only legal encounters that may be held are "sparring exhibitions" promoted by domestic corporations in halls or buildings leased for not less than a year for a sum of not

City Boxing Law Is Held Invalid By Judge Grimm

Decision Dissolves Mayor's Boxing Board—Police Committee Not Functioning.

The future of boxing in St. Louis became a decidedly tangled affair today when Circuit Judge Grimm declared invalid the city ordinance which regulated it under the supervision of a commission of five members appointed by Mayor Kiel.

The ruling was made in passing upon a demurrer filed by Victor J. Miller, treasurer of the Police Board, who was co-defendant with the Mayor, the Police Board and the Boxing Commission, in a suit filed by the Angelica Physical Culture Club to prevent interference with its boxing programs in the city.

Miller demurred to the petition on the ground that the plaintiffs came into contact with unlawful hands in that the State law specifically prohibited public boxing matches.

"Can't License Crime." Judge Grimm, explaining his decision, emphasized the apparent conflict between the ordinance and the State law and said:

"The plaintiffs conduct public matches in violation of the criminal statutes of the State, it places the city in the position of saying that while it does not care to prosecute violators under the criminal statutes, it will permit them to operate upon payment of a license fee."

"This is, in effect, licensing a crime. No court will countenance the commission of a crime, and the city, through this ordinance, cannot license the commission of such a crime."

"There are several other features of the ordinance which show it to be invalid. If the boxing clubs are private enterprises, the city has no right to exact a license from them, as another license provides for the licensing of certain businesses. Boxing under the city's present definition is not a business."

"Further, the ordinance provides for collection of license fees from legally organized clubs, but does not permit the city to collect such fees from voluntary associations."

Game Returns to Old Status. Judge Grimm said that his decision would restore boxing to its former status. The old law permitted boxing matches before private clubs to which the public was not admitted. Such exhibitions were countenanced by the police under the old system.

Judge Grimm's decision leaves boxing high and dry, according to P. H. Brockman, President of the Police Board. Brockman said that the Police Board Boxing Commission, appointed when Victor J. Miller was president, had been dissolved.

"I am not particularly interested in boxing and have given the matter no thought as yet. It will come up before the board at its pleasure," he said.

Brockman said that he intended to hold a conference with Gov. Hyde in the near future to determine what stand the Police Board would take in the matter.

Suit Still Before Court.

City Counselor Haid said that he had not read the opinion of the Court and was not in a position to say definitely what action he would take.

"I will confer with President Aloe of the Board of Aldermen, who backed the measure," Haid said. "If the ordinance can be rewritten to conform with the opinion of the Court we will rewrite it. But that must await a complete consideration of the case."

The suit brought by the Angelica Physical Culture Club is still before the Court. The opinion was given merely in overruling the demurrer filed by Miller.

Fighting Finish Has Prepared Yanks for Series, Ruth Asserts

American Leaguers Relaxed in 1921 After Clinching the Pennant Early, but This Year the Machine Is Tuned to Give Its Best Against the Giants, Slugger Writes.

By Babe Ruth.

NEW YORK, Oct. 3.—After winning the pennant, on the road, in the face of the toughest kind of a playing schedule, Miller Huggins quietly slipped his repeating champions into New York early Monday, ready to get at the team that gave us a licking last October.

In 1921, after "breaking the back" of the pennant race by beating Cleveland at the Polo Grounds in September, the Yankees had a pretty soft thing of it looking across the finish. This year we had a fight to the last ditch and that's no joke.

When we started for Philadelphia early in September on our last Western swing, the Browns looked like a much better bet than Cleveland did a year ago. We took two beatings at Chicago, where Kild Gleson turned on full steam. At St. Louis we ran into a ball club full of so much courage that it was tough to see them lose. Everything was against us at St. Louis and the home crowd, with its first pennant nearly in its grasp, was a handicap to the Yankees. Against Detroit, our so-called fix, we had to fight every inch of the way, and Ty Cobb played the game of his life. But we cleaned up. At Cleveland we took the odd game and then moved to Boston, where the Red Sox gave us three days that were tougher than at St. Louis.

"Yankee Spirit Better." I am not sorry or complaining that we had to win under such difficult circumstances. I am glad of it. I doubt if last year's Yankees could have made the grade of the past three weeks. It's the spirit of this year's club, eliminating so much of the individual-star stuff, that has won a second pennant. And that change in the Yankees is what I think will enable us to beat the Giants, even more so than our batting and our pitching. I believe in relation to this particular series, Yankee pitching strength is overestimated.

Last year the fans came to the Polo Grounds expecting to see a well drilled National League ball club play the free and easy champions of the American League. Even among their warmest admirers, the Yankees were looked upon as so many well trained seals, considered good ball players, but not a good ball club.

And when, in those first couple of games, the Yankees played their rivals off their feet in team fielding and team base-running the experts were dumbfounded. But the keynote of our ball club then was individual performance and eventually it cost us the series.

Everyone wanted to see Carl Mays pitch chiefly because they expected him to exhibit his so-called "submarine ball," as though he were a magician in a side-show. This year, instead of looking for any particular pitcher, the crowd just expects to see a crackjack pitching staff. A Team of Hitters This Year. Instead of waiting for a home run every time I come to bat, the fans will go out to the Polo Grounds to see a team of batters. Schang, Pipp, Dugan, Witt and Meusel. But, of course, I might surprise them. That's what I'm paid for. I haven't by any means retired from the home run business, but it is a good thing, not only for the fans and the Yankee club, but also good for me, that the crowd no longer expects or almost demands home runs every day.

I'm not taking anything away from the wonderful work of Hornsby, or from Williams or Walker. I tried my best to hit home runs every day I was in the game this summer, but I also tried to improve my game in other ways. I realize that I have looked bad on fly balls at times, but on the other hand the boys on the club seem to feel that my throwing and base-running has improved considerably.

I don't know how the average fan views the Yankees, but to me from the inside, and taking into consideration the talk in the club house, as well as the betting and fielding averages, I think the Yankees have undergone a great change.

The improved club playing has improved the individual player. Wally Pipp is batting and fielding better than he ever did before. Joe Dugan is an entirely different player than when he worked for Connie Mack. Bob Meusel is a better batter and fielder and the greatest long-distance thrower I ever saw. Wally Schang has had a wonderful batting year, has worked hard behind the plate, and has pulled more quick thinking, trick stuff than he ever did last year. The rest of the club is right in step and Manager Huggins is strictly the boss.

Like the Baseball, the Veiled Prophet's Ball Seems to Be Getting Livelier Every Year

Unwarranted Odds on Yankees Almost Tempt McGraw to Risk His Bank Roll on the Series

Manager of World's Champions Says Giants Are a Team of Such Great Prowess and Courage That Any Betting Other Than at Even Money Is Ridiculous.

By John J. McGraw,
Manager of World's Champion Giants.

NEW YORK, Oct. 3.—Why should there be such odds as 8 to 5 in favor of the Yankees as I have seen quoted in the newspapers? They look so ridiculous to me that I have become impressed with the idea that it is all propaganda.

Now, while I never have in my long career of over 30 years in baseball, bet on a game that I was personally interested in. I have been tempted to break that rule which I established in my early days in the national pastime. But I don't think I will do so. In fact, I am sure I will not. I have the life of me I cannot grasp the idea of these ridiculous odds.

I still claim that the Giants are a team of such prowess and are so difficult a proposition to beat that any variance in the betting on the result of the world's series is so surprising that it came as a shock.

Not that it has made any loss of confidence in my estimation of my team's ability to defeat the Yankees, nor has it had that effect on any of my players. It is just for me to laugh that's all.

Expect Brilliant Fielding.

I am of the opinion that the games of the coming world's series will be featured by fielding that will be far away beyond the spectacular work that emphasized several contests of the "big show" last year.

This is on account of both teams having passed through the strain of the season's close races in their respective leagues and have also fought one other world's series between them. They will, in consequence, be right on edge for the great battle that is to be started tomorrow.

I think this struggle will be of the "second" description. Everything points that way. In many other experiences as manager in other world's series, and in which money turned as the result of a single play.

Shortstop Scott of Yankees Has Played 986 Straight Games

By the Associated Press.
NEW YORK, Oct. 3.—VEREHT SCOTT, shortstop, who will take the field with the Yankees tomorrow in the first game of the world series, finished the American League season this year within 14 games of his goal—playing in 1000 consecutive major league contests.

His streak of 986 straight games, far beyond all previous records, was started June 29, 1916, with Boston. He was with the Red Sox until traded to New York last winter.

NEALE WILL NOT SIGN TO COACH W. AND J.

By the Associated Press.
PITTSBURGH, Oct. 3.—Coach Earle (Greasy) Neale of the Washington and Jefferson College football eleven declared in Pittsburgh yesterday that he will not sign a contract to coach the Washington, Pennsylvania squad next year.

"There must be only one boss and when I am coaching I want to be that boss," declared Neale. He added that he had been "hampered and annoyed" in his work by "outsiders" who attempted to dictate what he should and should not do.

Neale, a former major league baseball player, took charge of the W. and J. eleven last year.

Gophers Hold Workout.

By the Associated Press.
MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Oct. 3.—A light workout was the program Coach Spaulding put the University of Minnesota football team through here yesterday. The regulars came through Saturday's practice with the scrubs in good condition except for McDonald, tackle, who suffered an injured wrist that may prevent him from playing in the opening game of the season against North Dakota here next Saturday.

Herring Holds Adair.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Oct. 3.—Red Herring of Birmingham knocked out Young Adair of Chicago in the fifth round of their 10-round bout here last night. Herring toyed with Adair for four rounds, then floored the Chicagoan with a straight right to the jaw.

Wray, Mathewson, McGraw, Ruth, Lardner, Broun and Howe On Post-Dispatch World Series Staff

"How was the game won and lost?"
"I wonder what McGraw thought of that play."
"How did Ruth figure in the game?"
"How did the pitching compare with the days of Mathewson?"

There will be a score of questions in your mind while the world series is being played. You will want to read about the great baseball classic from many viewpoints.

A battery of experts selected from all possible fields will collaborate to cover the World Series for readers of the Post-Dispatch.

The manager of one of the contenders, the holder of the home-run record, a big league umpire, baseball's greatest comic writer—these are a few of the special writers who will be on duty to see that readers of the Post-Dispatch get the best service possible.

The battery follows:

John McGraw
Manager of the Giants, who will be the underdogs in the series. McGraw is one of the smartest men in baseball. He will tell the inside story of how the games were won and lost.

Christy Mathewson, hero of many a world series during his career with the Giants from 1900 to 1916, will witness the coming struggle at New York. It will be his first series since he retired to Saranac Lake several years ago to fight a dangerous illness. He will write about the series for readers of the Post-Dispatch. His comparisons of the series of today and those in which he participated will be interesting. He will contribute a story on each game.

Babe Ruth
Holder of the major league home-run record of 59 in 1921. He may decide the series with a home run. His intimate story of the baseball struggle will be interesting.

Heywood Broun, New York feature writer, who always sees the series from an interesting angle, will treat the high lights of each game.

Ring Lardner
Famous comic baseball writer, author of the "You Know Me, Al" stories, will tell in his inimitable style how "the serious should have went." He'll not pick the winner, but he'll pick both winner and loser to pieces, and you'll enjoy it.

Bozeman Bulger, veteran New York baseball writer and contributor to leading magazines, who has followed the fortunes of the New York Yankees all season, will be able to give an interesting story from the Yankees' side of the struggle.

John E. Wray
Sports editor of the Post-Dispatch, will tell how each game is won and lost, sending a descriptive running story during each game, elaborating on the play-by-play story which the Associated Press will flash from the press box.

Irwin Howe, official statistician of the American League, will contribute comparisons of the two contenders, based on records compiled from the official box scores of the season.

Seiger, Aspirant For Featherweight Crown, on Trial

New York Boxing Sensation Meets Worthy Foe in Kid Wagner.

By Bert Igoe.

NEW YORK, Oct. 3.—Sammy Seiger and Kid Wagner, the latter a king among the Philadelphia featherweights, will meet in a 12-round bout at the Pioneer Sporting Club tonight. And right here we'll warn all world series sinners and visiting firemen who attend to low bridge, as the chinchilla is going to fly when these two bump chests.

Wagner is a smart fighter, "good hater" and a will-o'-the-wisp, on his pins. He is facing a veteran of the amateur ranks and one who can drop his man in his tracks if he lands his short right hook to the jaw. That is his specialty.

Seiger jumped into fame in one night at Madison Square Garden last winter when he dropped Johnny Murray in the first round of their bout. Murray was a 2 to 1 shot over the former amateur and with Seiger's victory began a string of short-end triumphs among all classes of boxers. It seemed that little Sammy set the fashion that evening.

Wagner has left Quakertown behind him. He intends to campaign here and has posted $2500 with the boxing board as guarantee that he really wants to meet Johnny Dundee for the featherweight title of New York State. A lad who thinks himself that good ought to be able to go some.

Floyd Johnson a Hitter.

Floyd Johnson has many faults to overcome before he can hope to carry his proud head to the top of the heavyweight heap, but with all his faults he has the wallop-de-doo, and after all, it is the pole on the chops that counts in the fast little world of fistiana.

Johnson is meeting a pretty sweet hitter at the Garden on Friday night.

Eisel Forfeits Match to Jordan

St. Louis Wrestler Suffers Injured Shoulder and Is Forced to Concede Fall and Match.

Gus Eisel, a Missouri middleweight wrestling champion, was forced to withdraw from his match with Chris Jordan, claimant of the world's middleweight title, at the Armory last night when he suffered a badly wrenched right shoulder after one hour and four minutes of wrestling. Jordan was awarded the fall and when Eisel announced after several minutes that he would be unable to continue the match was forfeited.

When the match opened Jordan took the aggressive and Eisel was apparently outclassed. However, the Missourian's great speed came into play and the match was about even until he wrenched his shoulder.

Eisel put all his strength into an attempt to break one of Jordan's holds and in so doing suffered his injury. Jordan time after time applied a double wristlock that had Eisel in great pain, but failed to accomplish a fall.

Lloyd Carter of St. Louis won his match with Boris Dimitroff of Bulgaria, when Referee Baptiste disqualified the latter.

REPORT SAYS STALLINGS WILL SUCCEED WILHELM AS PHILLIES' MANAGER

George Stallings, manager and part owner of the Rochester Club of the International League and former manager of the Boston Braves and New York Yankees, will be appointed manager of the Philadelphia National League Club for next season, according to an apparently well-founded rumor. If the report proves to be true Stallings will succeed Irving Wilhelm, who was appointed pilot of the Phillies to succeed Bill Donovan last year.

Stallings has been connected with the Rochester club since he quit the Braves several years ago. He earned the title of "Miracle Man of Baseball" in 1914, when the Braves started their famous rush from last place in July of that year and beat out the Giants for the National League pennant. Stallings' players then continued their mad pace, and went to four consecutive victories over the supposedly invincible Athletics in the world's series.

No confirmation of the report that Stallings is to return to major league baseball could be obtained from William F. Baker, owner of the Phillies.

BURKE, OUTWEIGHED 26 POUNDS, DEFEATS MINNESOTA PLASTERER

NEW ORLEANS, La., Oct. 3.—Martin Burke defeated Fred Fulton, Minnesota plasterer, in 15 rounds last night and although Fulton entered the ring a 2 to 1 favorite, there was not a person in the crowd who disputed Referee Slim Brennan's decision. Burke outboxed and out-guessed Fulton and won six by big margins.

Fulton fought in a clumsy manner and laid his 211 pounds all over Burke at times. Burke weighed 175. Fulton tried repeatedly to land a right uppercut and did connect with Burke's stomach with left hooks. Burke, however, kept landing his left jab to Fulton's face and head and split Fulton's left eye and staggered him twice with lefts to the jaw.

In the fifth round when Burke staggered Fulton for the first time, the big crowd became frantic and yelled for a knockout.

57 PER CENT OF WOMEN IN SWEDEN VOTED DRY

But 60 Per Cent of Men Opposed Prohibition—Cities Went Wet, Rural Districts Dry.

By the Associated Press.

STOCKHOLM, Oct. 2.—That 57 per cent of Sweden's women favored prohibition of the manufacture and sale of beverages containing more than 2 1/4 per cent of alcohol, while 60 per cent of the men were against it, is now apparent from a further count of the votes cast at the recent liquor referendum which resulted in a victory for the wets.

Sweden now will continue the present rationing system, whereby the heads of families who prove that they are respectable and that their rationing can purchase about a gallon of strong liquor per month, while anyone can order drinks with meals under legal restriction at public restaurants.

Rural and City Vote Compared.

The final tabulation shows that in Stockholm, Gothenburg and Malmö, as well as in other cities and suburban districts, both men and women were strongly against prohibition, while in the country districts in general, especially in the northern part of Sweden, both men and women were as a rule in favor of prohibition. In the capital, for example, 90 per cent of the men and 83 per cent of the women were against the proposed measure. This may be contrasted with a certain agricultural section where 90 per cent of the women and 73 per cent of the men wanted 2 1/4 per cent drinks.

It is interesting to note that the majorities of men and women were on the same side of the question in 15 provinces out of 25, while in the other 10 provinces the two sides of the family seem to disagree in their taste for stimulants.

That Swedish women do not neglect the ballot is proved by the fact that in Stockholm they outnumbered the men at the polls by more than 9000. And the showing for the entire country was 800,000 women as against 338,000 men.

Voting Was Orderly.

The voting, which took place Sunday, Aug. 27, was conducted in the most orderly fashion. Lines began to form at 9 in the morning at the various polling places in Stockholm. Among those who voted early were Premier Branting and his wife, who voted against prohibition, as did also Dr. Bratt, Sweden's "drink dictator," who is the originator of the present rationing system.

Gay propaganda was carried on throughout the day by both sides by means of parades, mounted heralds, and even airplanes. At night the square in front of the Royal Opera was packed with thousands of people who amused themselves by watching the bulletins of results until 2 in the morning.

BOUSTING OF DAUGHTERY URGED

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, Mich., Oct. 2.—An appeal to "the people of the country" to elect Congressmen and Senators in the coming elections "who will vote for the impeachment of Attorney-General Daugherty" was made here yesterday by Benjamin C. Marsh, managing director of the Farmers' National Council of Washington, D. C., in speaking at the opening session of the triennial convention of the United Brotherhood of Maintenance of Way Employees and Railway Shop Laborers.

"The wage earners and the farmers of the country are to blame for their own lack of prosperity," Marsh said. "They represent 90 per cent of the voting power of the nation and can vote themselves prosperity when they make up their minds to do so."

Short Skirt Killed Prude—Long Skirt Would Bring Her to Life Again!

ANDRE TRIDON ANALYZES PSYCHOLOGICAL EFFECT OF SKIRTS ON FEMININE MIND.

Short Skirts—

Keep a woman free, unhampered in mind and body, with a sane, sensible point of view and pride in her appearance.

Long Skirts—

Subdue a woman, enslave her, make her careless of her hosiery and slippers, and cause her to become a prude.

By FAY STEVENSON.

WHAT will be the psychological effect of skirts upon the feminine mind this season? If a woman dons the fashionable long skirt will she be a trifle more prude than she was last year, when she sported about in knee-length affairs?

If she still continues to wear short skirts and to display the same amount of ankle she has in the past will she be as free in her thoughts as some of the Mrs. Grundies accused her?

"A woman will always act exactly the way she is dressed," said Andre Tridon, the well-known psychoanalyst. "A shabby woman has a dowdy mind; a well-dressed woman is vivacious; a woman in long skirts is subdued, enslaved; a woman in short skirts is free, unhampered in mind or body."

Mr. Tridon thought a moment seriously about skirts. One could almost see women with moving skirts, three feet long trailing through his broad brow. Then appeared the rainy daisies, the first women who dared to wear a short skirt on rainy days to business and to go shopping. Then came the ankle-length ladies and then the care-free flapper in her knee-length skirt. Soon came grandmas in the same length skirt and the new styles just as we were about to venture forth in knickerbockers and enjoy the freedom of our legs.

Andre Tridon shook his head and shrugged his shoulders. "I don't like to see it," he said, wrinkling up his face as though sampling lemon. "No man will like to see or, rather, not to see" (a wicked grin this time), "but the reason I don't want women to don long skirts" (perfectly serious now) "is because it will affect their attitude toward life. There is a great psychological difference there."

"The woman who goes back to long skirts will—"

"Will go back to long-winded ideas," interrupted Tridon. "She will become a prude. She will give every woman who dares to show three inches of her leg. She will say 'limb' again instead of 'leg.' She will become overcast and, in a word, she will undo all the good work that the short skirt and the freedom from the idea that a woman's leg is a thing for motion rather than an ornament."

"But here I am, the prude, the woman is all wrong. The leg should be considered as the arm, and recently, because so many women displayed such a goodly portion of this part of the body, legs required a great deal of beautifying. I know women who had their legs massaged to keep them slender and graceful. I know others who took daily exercises to keep their legs in trim, and women who played pianos two hours daily not because they liked music but because they knew this kept their ankles in perfect trim."

"The very fact that the short skirt kept these women on the constant quiver and made them exercise their legs is sufficient to hold out for the short skirt. Women who go back to long skirts will lose all pride in their legs. They will let them get fat and flabby again. They will wear darned hosiery and run-over slippers. They will hide behind their skirts, and while their legs glisten with the least attention to the way they walk, their minds will become overcast—they will be conscious whenever a stray wind uncovers their chaste limbs and, in fact, all their good, sane, sensible points of view will be altered."

"Clothes dominate a man or a woman more than any one realizes," continued Mr. Tridon. "When I am in a short skirt, jeans and an old hat I talk differently and think differently. I want to be rough and tell crude stories. I am less careful of my language and I like to linger with fellows who talk the language which suits my clothes. But when I am in evening clothes I am dignified and pompous. I select my language with care and I wouldn't think of broaching some of the subjects which suits my clothes. But when I am in evening clothes I am dignified and pompous. I select my language with care and I wouldn't think of broaching some of the subjects which suits my clothes."

"The woman in the long skirt will find herself in the same predicament. She will become conscious that she must be more dignified. She will even become pompous and want to go back to the long gaiters. She will, in a word, become that same sedate 'yes' and 'no' person I find myself being when I am donned in evening clothes."

"While the girl who clings to short skirts will remain the same open-minded, broad, utterly unscrupulous girl we have learned to love during the last year or so."

"Ninety per cent of the girls and women who have expressed themselves on the subject as to their vote for long or short skirts are out for short skirts," I told Mr. Tridon. "Many of the girls admit that the knee length skirt is ridiculous, but at the same time assert they are for the reasonably short skirt of say nine to 10 inches from the ground. These girls declare they will wear this length skirt no matter what."

"That 99 per cent are proving that they represent the real American girl idea," emphatically declared Tridon. "The Texas girl in her rough costume, the pioneer girl in her trousers and the girl in riding habit all smack of America's true spirit. The American girl is too clever to go back to the shackles of long skirts after winning the freedom of knickerbockers and short street dresses. I haven't a doubt that some of the evening dresses will be long affairs. At least, they will have trailing sashes or draperies, but there will be slits and slashes and the well-kept, well-exercised and shapely legs of Miss 1922-1923 will be visible. Leave it to her."

"The American girl has an open mind. You can't make a prude out of her. Some women never wore short skirts, but those who did have gained an independence of mind and body which they will never give up."

Fashion News Notes

PARIS.—Ribbon is as popular today as ever and, as one consequence it is put forth in more fascinating colors and patterns daily. Although ornaments of feather and of big silk flowers are seen on many of the smart hats, yet there is no smarter decoration just now than a towering end of ribbon set up straight and stiff at one side of the crown. These ribbon ends or wings are so extremely high that they must be made of heavy material and then carefully wired to prevent collapse.

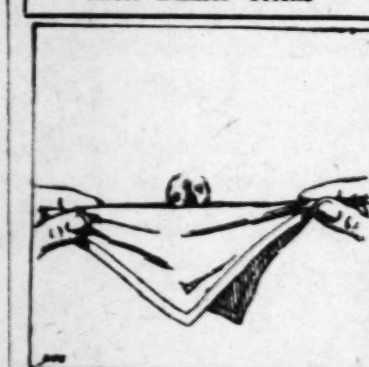

NEW YORK.—With monkey fur so very popular as a trimming for all sorts of garments, we may expect rather bizarre effects. For example, an evening gown model which attracted attention today depends for decoration chiefly on a big tuft of monkey fur fastened at the top of the left shoulder straps and a corresponding tuft at the right of the normal waistline.

UNCLE SAM SAYS

Care of the Baby.

THE Children's Bureau has issued an interesting and valuable booklet on the care of the baby. It contains chapters devoted to the nursery, clothing, outdoor life, feeding, weaning, sleep, habits and the treatment of the common ailments and contagious diseases. It is the best booklet on child care issued by the Government and one which every mother of infants should have. Readers of the Post-Dispatch may obtain a copy of this booklet free by addressing a postal card to the Children's Bureau, Department of Labor, Washington, D. C., asking for "Infant Care."

After-Dinner Tricks

No. 243.—The Balanced Quarter. A handkerchief is folded twice, so that it forms a square—one quarter of its normal size. A 25-cent piece is laid upon the handkerchief. The problem is to lift the handkerchief, with the coin on it, in such a manner that the coin stands on edge. The spectators cannot figure how to do the trick, but it is really quite simple. Take hold of the folded handkerchief by the corners diagonally opposite, and lift the handkerchief, stretching it at the same time. A sharp crease will be formed diagonally across the handkerchief, in which the quarter stands upon its edge.

Pearl Tapioca

A PEACH dessert is made by cooking four tablespoons of granulated tapioca in four cups of boiling water 20 minutes or until clear; add four tablespoons of sugar and one teaspoon of salt. Mix two cups of crushed peaches with one tablespoon of orange juice and place in the bottom of a buttered baking dish, pour over the tapioca and set in a moderate oven for 20 minutes. Serve with orange custard.

The Daughter of Helen Kent

By Sarah Comstock

"Expansion—that's the word!" McNab said to Helen, as she stopped for an exchange of greetings. "That's why we've fallen for you. We look to you to help us do it. You expand us and we'll expand you—get me? This shop doesn't pretend to be any school of philanthropy, but good business helps everybody all 'round—am I right? So—we'll start off with one of our best suites—reception room and private office—and you'll get more room as soon as you need it. Is that square?"

"That's all I ask," she told him. "Oh, but I like it!" she looked around, over the bigness of it, the hurry of it, the urgent prosperity of it all, and her eyes snapped. "It's been my dream for years. It spells life. Now—where is my domain?"

"Next to our company doctor's, and communicating, so you'll find it handy to confer. Miss Muldoon and I'll show you the way." He called the young stenographer who was to assist Helen; "pretty, and potentially intelligent, but sentimental," was Helen's mental appraisement. "However," she promised herself, "it will not take long to develop the muscles of the intelligence and amputate the sentimentality."

Thus unknowingly did Miss Muldoon's long-lashed glances and full red poutings march to a threatened doom.

"Pleased to meet you," said Miss Muldoon in response to the introduction, and dreamed not that the surgeon waited.

McNab led on through the corridor for some distance, and halted.

"Here you are—sunny side, outlook toward Broadway, plenty of room, mahogany, peacock-blue decorations—what'll you bet we make a hit with Mrs. Kent when she sees it, Miss Muldoon, eh?"

"Hi? Well, I guess yes!" And the two beamed upon Helen like a pair of happily conspiring Santa Clauses.

McNab stepped ahead, opening the door to lead the way in. The others were behind him in the hall, they heard his hearty: "Why, hello, Doc, you back? Heard about the new neighbor we've got for you while you were in Boston?"

In reply came an outburst of rage. It was, to be sure, in a deep, rich voice, a voice that bespoke cultivation; but neither deep richness nor cultivation concealed its wrath.

"I'll have nothing to do with this affair! A woman's department, indeed! What is the Monroe Mutual for? I scorned to be a part of it. A dignified, conservative old company—for fifteen years I have been proud to be connected with it—and now it disgraces itself!"

"Oh, come, Dr. Aspiden, you're treating me rough!" Thus the conciliatory McNab.

"Disgraces itself, I say and I mean! A woman's department, indeed! Filled with furbelows and chocolate creams! The company's doomed, as far as any decent standing goes!"

"Oh, look here, Doc, you ought to have said—that's all that's the matter with you! When a man stays single too long he gets sort of out of the habit of appreciating women. They aren't so bad—they make chocolate cream!" The company's still maintained his soothing drawl, which apparently acted as a red rag.

"Make things lively! Lively! Yes, sir, these new women's department of yours has made them lively to the extent that you may look for another physician to the company! Here I return to town, enter my old suite, stroll into these rooms, as used to do when they were occupied by the out-of-town agents, to be told that an interloper, a woman—"

The pudgy hand closed the door hastily at this, with a click. Helen could hear the murmur of what was probably McNab's protestation; then a sharp crescendo:

"I tell you I shall sever my connection at once!"

Helen laid a perfectly gloved hand firmly upon the knob; turned it; entered. Miss Muldoon, following, dumbly scoured, and wondered what on earth was going to happen, saw McNab step forward with a distressed, "Mrs. Kent, just a minute, if you'll excuse us—," saw Dr. Aspiden clamp his lips and stand defiantly staring at the "interloper" with an air of outraged dignity; saw the "interloper" graceful, suave, extend a hand to him with a self-possession smile that flashed a twinkling of relief.

"So this is Dr. Aspiden? I have to plead guilty as one crime—that of being a woman. Otherwise I'm not to blame for this situation. The company has chosen me as a representative, and is putting me into this suite. But, the fault of being a woman rests wholly with me. I always intended to be a man, and I simply failed, like any other weakling, to live up to my intentions." Dr. Aspiden's hand had gracefully received here, and withdrawn in haste. Helen, looking a considerable distance up, saw an austere erect man of some forty-five years or more; firmly and finely chiseled features; gray eyes under straight brows.

met his eyes with a nonchalant smile.

"I don't," she replied, and proceeded to settle herself at ease before her capacious desk. "Now, Miss Muldoon, you and I will put our house in order." And she smiled a charming dismissal to the very red and very perturbed McNab.

It was just before she left at noon that a tap was heard on the door through which Dr. Aspiden had departed. Irritation lay in the very tap.

"Come in!"

As she looked up at him now, she was struck by a weariness in the Doctor's whole aspect. It showed in voice and movements, despite the irritation; it was enhanced by the graying of hair, the thinness of figure. It was borne out by a certain carelessness of dress, contrasting oddly with the surgical immaculateness of the man; linen scrupulously white on the one hand; on the other, a homely brown necktie badly frayed, a drab business suit in need of pressing, hair tousled as if fingers had perpetually rumbled through it. "Exquisitely clean and abominably untidy," Helen's observations recorded mentally.

"I just stepped in to mention what you may not notice—that if your desk is turned this way"—he seized and moved it—"you will get the best light and air without a draught. And I have told my secretary to bring you the window ventilators I had made for my office—they are especially good, and can't be bought. Good day."

"But you will need them!"—

"No, I shan't," he protested with annoyance. "They wouldn't fit windows in any other building. Good day!" This time he escaped. There was no opportunity to thank him.

Miss Muldoon stared after him. "Ain't it the funniest thing? Mad as a wet hen—I never saw him mad like that before—and all the same he wouldn't be Dr. Aspiden if he wasn't doing something for somebody. Yes, take it from me, that's Dr. Aspiden!"

"My, but ain't he mad today!"

Miss Muldoon opened the lavatory door, upon the inside of which hung a mirror. With reverent touch she patted into shape a little pad of hair above each ear.

"I never saw him so mad," she repeated, muting. "I'm awfully sorry, though"—pat—"that he really"—pat, pat—"is going." Pat, pat, pat. "You need not be," replied Helen.

In her nearest, surest, most deliberate articulation, she said faintly and diagonally: "The adjusted her hat. 'He will not go,' stated the surprising Mrs. Kent."

Miss Muldoon turned suddenly, wrote sharp glances at Helen. "The momentary curiosity got the better of secretarial restraint. 'Why—do you know him?'"

"No, my child, I have never seen him before." Helen picked up her pen, and wrote a note to McNab. "I do not know Dr. Aspiden. But I do know his sex. And some day," she added, pausing in the door, "we will have little talk about this matter, see you and I."

"Monday," Miss Muldoon—at nine sharp, please, so as to get a good start. My cousin and a lady whom I have met at my club have asked to take out policies as soon as the department opens—Miss Clifton, and Mrs. Gwendolen Elise Hobson. Remember the names, won't you? That makes for good business. And now, good-bye. I'm sure we shall get on very nicely."

THE winter told off its weeks, and still two Bees dwelt within the charming nest of Helen's feathered. So, still, dreaming out from her west window toward the dark shimmering river, Bee would sigh:

"In this great city, among millions of people, how can I ever find him? Any day I may pass him—brush against him—and never know! Oh, it could go on for years and years, long, dreadful years, if I don't find him! And after awhile the years would come to be—forever!"

THE days were very busy now. Bee attended morning and afternoon sessions; Helen spent long hours at the office, having lunch downtown. She had swept up the new work, was carrying it before her with incredible vigor and success.

On the Monday when she officially entered her new department, she had knocked at McNab's door with a smiling request.

"Will you be so good as to have

Business School. Yes, she was indeed "coming around" at last to a sane viewpoint. What a simple matter it was, as it proved, to stamp out these diseases of youth! As simple as it had been to carry the baby Bee through her light attacks of measles and whooping-cough!

And the other Bee, unseen, unsuspected, though, as Helen had dreamed and longed and ached on. Day after day, as the weeks grew into months, that eye and brain, trained to ceaseless alertness, watched. Still they scanned every long masculine figure; still they would flash a swift message of hope back to the longing heart, then another, equally swift, of failure.

In shops, theaters, restaurants, walking "bus-riding," in company and alone; still they watched without ceasing. And still, dreaming out from her west window toward the dark shimmering river, Bee would sigh:

Choosing a Mate

By WINIFRED BLACK

"WHAT does he see in her?"—not a thing but somebody who'll be easy to boss; not a thing but a little clinging, good-natured goose who'll do exactly as he says and never have a thought of her own as long as she lives! That's what he likes about her. That's what all men like. That's why the fools are always married first and always stay married longest." So says Miss Fanny Hurst, the clever woman who in her stories makes us all laugh when she wants us to laugh and cry when she wants us to cry.

Do you agree with Fanny? I'm afraid I don't—not entirely. I don't quite agree, either, with what Miss Hurst says when she declares that this is a man-made world and that any woman who wants to get the best of things must fit into the man-made scheme.

Man-made—I don't quite like that word. What were the women doing while the men were making the world? Sitting at home in a nice, dry, warm cave, while the Father was out in the wet hunting for some animal easy to kill, so that Mrs. Cave Man and her children could have something good to eat when dinner time came?

Jack thinks he chooses. Mrs. Cave Man didn't have to stay in the cave—if she didn't want to she was as strong and as quick and as courageous as her husband. I wonder if she wasn't just a little bit the cleverer of the two: I wonder if she didn't choose the better part of the job, and coax and flatter Mr. Cave Man into believing that it was his own idea to keep her at home out of the wet.

Men are selfish creatures, to be sure, but the only thing more selfish than a selfish man is a selfish, coaxing, flattering woman.

And how men do love to be fooled by one of them!

Women are not half so easily fooled as men. Women judge a man by what he does, and not by what he says. Men will believe anything any woman tells them, if she will only coax him into thinking that she is doing it for him and really can't help herself—poor little dependent, innocent thing!

But back of all that I don't think either Jack or Jill has much to do with choosing a mate. Jack thinks he's making up his own mind, when he decided to be married. Haven't you seen Jack sitting in a corner watching the girls go by? This one is too tall—that one is too short—this one is too quiet—that one is too lively—this one is too clever—that one is too dull—and Well, when the right minute comes for Jack to marry, he gets right up out of his comfortable corner and walks into church like a lamb led to the slaughter, and he hasn't a thing to say about it, one way or the other. Something a good deal bigger and better, and older and wiser than he is, chose the girl for Jack, when Jack was looking the other way.

And it's the same way with Jill. Jill—let's say she's a poor girl, brought up in a home with a lot of quarrelsome children and a discouraged father and a worried, nagging mother—Jill is going to marry money and brains and refinement. She will tell you so herself, and she means it, too.

A Hundred Years From Now—But some night when the moon shines in on the old-fashioned porch, and somebody down the street is thrumming the ukulele and humming something about somebody's glorious eyes, Jill will say "Yes" to some poor boy and think he's the very man of her dream.

Poor Jill—bless her heart!—she didn't choose the poor boy—not she! Something bigger and wiser, and older and stronger than a dozen Jill's, chose the poor boy for her, and all her brains and all her ability to the contrary notwithstanding.

Dutch Pie

S EVEN apples (quarter), 3/4-pound roll butter, seven or eight tablespoons sugar. Steam above for 15 minutes, then add six eggs well beaten and one pint sour cream, two tablespoons vanilla. Cook all together until thick; be careful it does not burn. Shake round zwieback on piepan, sprinkle on it a little sugar, cinnamon and nutmeg, then pour on it the sauce, then more ground zwieback, sugar, cinnamon and nutmeg. Bake in very slow oven over three-quarters of an hour. This makes one large pie or two small ones.

Little Joe Otter Catches a Dinner

By Thornton W. Burgess

The sauce that makes all food taste right is just a healthy appetite.

LITTLE Joe Otter certainly did enjoy his slippery slide and the young Fox enjoyed watching him. But by and by Little Joe grew hungry.

"I've had play enough," said he. "Play gives a fellow an appetite and I'm hungry."

"So am I," said the young Fox. He had been so interested in the things he had seen that he had forgotten all about eating, but when Little Joe mentioned the matter he suddenly felt very, very empty.

"I think," said Little Joe, "I'll go catch a trout."

"What is a trout?" inquired the young Fox.

"Come along with me and I'll show you," replied Little Joe. "If there is any better eating I don't know what it is."

Little Joe swam swiftly up the Laughing Brook and the young Fox followed along the bank. He hadn't the least idea what a trout was and he was filled with curiosity.

"It must be very nice," thought he, remembering what Little Joe had said. "If he can catch a trout perhaps I can. I'll watch him and see just how he does it. I wonder where a trout lives."

He soon found out. They came to another pool and Little Joe Otter disappeared under water. The young Fox caught a glimpse of a brown form shooting swiftly through the water, and then Little Joe's head popped up on the further side of the pool. In his mouth was something that glistened in the sun. The young Fox had never seen anything like it before. "What is that?" he asked as Little Joe climbed out on the bank not far from where the young Fox was sitting.

"It's a trout," replied Little Joe, amassing his lips as he swallowed a mouthful.

"What is a trout?" asked the young Fox for the second time.

"It's a fish. Don't you know a fish when you see it?" replied Little Joe.

"I—I never have seen a fish before," said the young Fox.

Little Joe stopped eating long enough to stare very hard at the young Fox. "Well, I never!" he exclaimed.

"Do you always find them in the water?" ventured the young Fox. "Don't they ever come out on land?" Little Joe nearly choked. "They never do if they can help it," he chuckled as he swallowed the last bit. Then he dived into the water again. A few minutes later he was back again with another trout. The mouth of the young Fox watered hungrily as he watched Little Joe gobble down that trout. "How do you catch them?" he asked.

"By swimming faster than they can, of course, stupid!" replied Little Joe. "This one was hiding under the bank, but it didn't do him any good. My! I am hungry! I think I'll have to have another."

Once more Little Joe disappeared and once more he was back in a few minutes with a fat trout. It seemed to the young Fox that that trout must be full of trout. You see, he had yet to learn what a wonderful fisherman Little Joe Otter is.

SPORT SALAD

By L. C. Davis.

POST-SEASON PLUMS.

THE Fort Worth Cats are out of luck. The Bears gave them a slam; While rooters dance the Mobile buck In Mobile, Alabama.

The New York Giants and the Yanks Once more are in the clear. They'll soon be drawing on the banks To win again next year.

No bacon did the Brownies fetch And hence we can't enthuse; The rooters here just yawn and stretch And sing the Pennant Blues.

The Cards who hoped to win the race Must be content to show; With Pittsburg they will share third place Likewise the series dough.

The Philly fans no longer wear Their customary frown; Their ball teams both came up for air. The Sox and Braves went down.

Our pennant interest having ceased. To other sports we turn; And New York's big world's series feast Is none of our concern.

QUITE SO.

The Red Sox wanted to win that third game from the Yanks the worst way. So they put in Ferguson.

St. Louis didn't win any pennants, but between George Sisler and Rogers Hornsby she nearly won all the other honors worth mentioning.

GET THIS RIGHT.

If the Browns and Yanks had tied for the pennant a five-game series would have been played, two in New York, two in St. Louis and a fifth, if necessary, to be tossed for. We object on the ground that three games would be sufficient. Therefore, in view of the fact that the Browns didn't tie the Yanks, and the series will not be played, we insist that they don't play one game in New York, one in St. Louis and the third, if necessary, in a neutral city.

Furthermore, if a play-off had been necessary we suggest that tickets for the series be limited to two to a customer to keep them out of the hands of the scalpers.

Although the series would have attracted widespread attention, there will be no change in the regular prices. Stay away early and avoid the rush.

How to Prevent Fires Told by Chief Panzer.

All right, Chief. Can you tell us how to start one when the furnace goes out and you have no kindling?

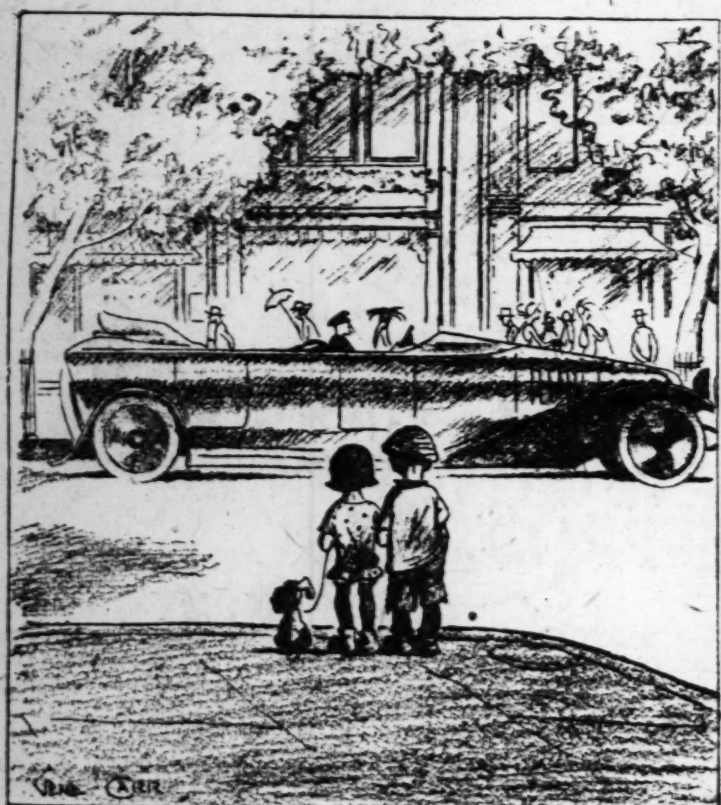

See where a series of new postage stamps will be on sale soon. Don't let the scalpers get hold of them.

Public School Teacher Has School Without Pupils.

She has nothing but the pupils of her eyes and she can't make them behave.

Babe Ruth picks the Yanks to win the world's series. Leaving McGraw nothing to pick but the Giants.
